Man Treated in a Hospital Grabs Officer's Gun, Kills Him

(AP) A suspect in a domestic incident who was being treated at a Minnesota hospital grabbed a gun from a sheriff's deputy and killed the officer early Sunday, prompting hospital security officers to subdue the suspect with a stun gun, authorities said. After the suspect was taken into custody he died, despite efforts by medical personnel to revive him. The struggle happened early Sunday at St. Cloud Hospital in the suspect's room, said Drew Evans, superintendent of the Minnesota Bureau of Criminal Apprehension. He said the suspect was not handcuffed at the time. Investigators are still trying to determine what led up to the shooting. "Several shots were fired during that struggle and then security officers were able to get into the room, and the suspect was tased with a Taser, and taken into custody," Evans said at a news conference. "After he was taken into custody he became unresponsive. Medical personnel performed lifesaving operations on him and he died at that time." Evans said the Aitkin County deputy killed was Steven Martin Sandberg, a 60-year-old investigator with the sheriff's office. The suspect was identified as Danny Leroy Hammond, 50, who lived near the city of Aitkin. Evans said autopsies were being performed on both of them and the medical examiner would determine more about how the suspect died.

International News – Significant Events

Palestinian Gunman Kills One, Wounds 11 in Israeli City of Beersheba

(Reuters) A Palestinian gunman went on a shooting rampage at the central bus station in the southern Israeli city of Beersheba on Sunday, killing a soldier and wounding 11 other people, police said. In one of the most serious Palestinian attacks against Israelis during this month's upsurge of violence, police said the attacker was shot dead after a protracted gun battle, police said. Palestinian media outlets named the attacker as Asam al-Araj from Shuafat, on the outskirts of Jerusalem. A number of the wounded were police officers. Hospital officials said two people were in critical condition. Initial reports had said two attackers were involved but the regional police commander said investigators later believed there was only one. Police commander Yoram Halevy said the gunman had entered the secured bus station and used a pistol to kill the soldier and grab his assault rifle, which he then used to shoot others. Forty-two Palestinians and eight Israelis have died in the recent violence, which was in part triggered by Palestinians' anger over what they see as increased Jewish encroachment on Jerusalem's al-Aqsa mosque compound. In public remarks on Sunday to his cabinet, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said: "We are preserving the status quo, we will continue to do so," referring to the Jerusalem holy site that is also revered by Jews as the location of two destroyed biblical temples.

Fire Weather Watch: North Bay Mountains

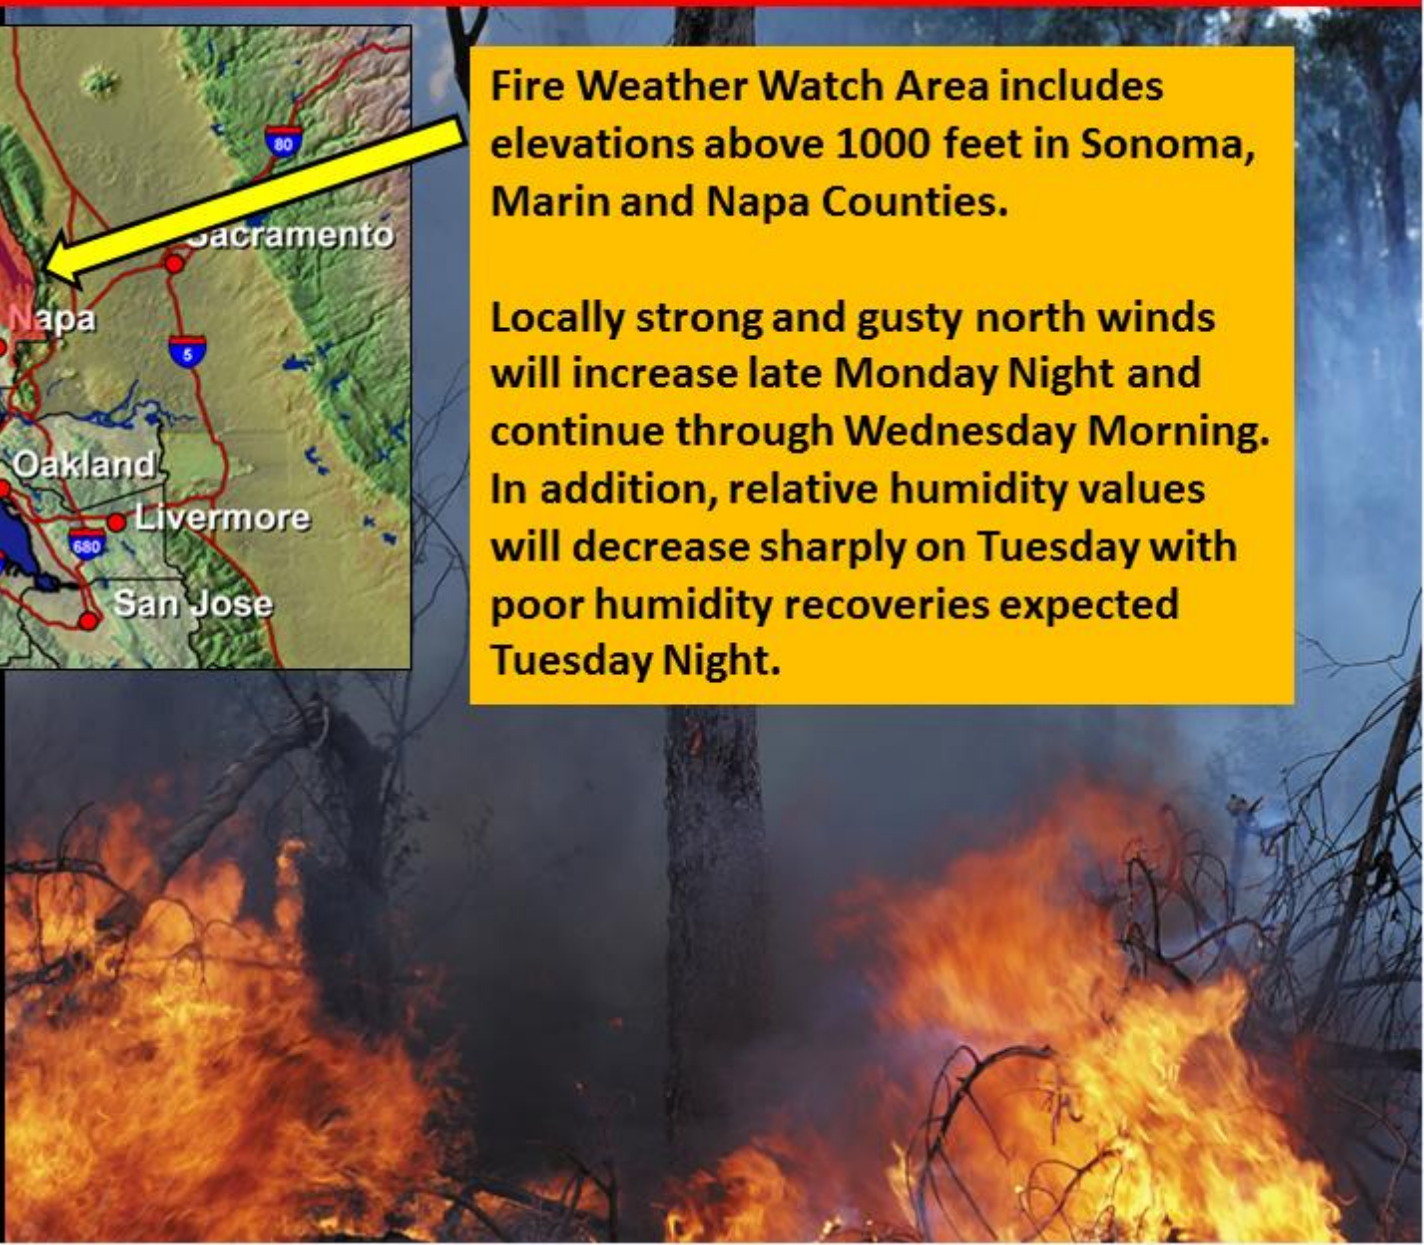

Late Monday Night Through late Wednesday Morning

Fire Weather Watch Area includes elevations above 1000 feet in Sonoma, Marin and Napa Counties.

Locally strong and gusty north winds will increase late Monday Night and continue through Wednesday Morning. In addition, relative humidity values will decrease sharply on Tuesday with poor humidity recoveries expected Tuesday Night.

Strong north winds in combination with low relative humidity values will result in increased fire danger over the North Bay Mountains.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A weakening front will approach the coast and produce isolated showers across far northwest California today. Otherwise, dry weather with a warming trend is in store through midweek as high pressure builds over the area.

Medford Weather:

Wider coverage and a higher probability of rain is forecast today, mainly west of the Cascades during the afternoon and early evening. Increased clouds across the area and the mainly west side rainfall will result in highs a few degrees cooler than on Sunday. A high pressure ridge will begin to build into the West Coast tonight. This will stabilize the air mass and result in areas of low clouds and patches of coastal and west side valley fog early Tuesday morning. The ridge will be weakened on Wednesday as a very weak cold front brushes past into Canada and Washington. This is expected to bring an increase in high clouds except for some lower clouds and maybe a few sprinkles near North Bend.

Reno Weather:

A few light showers will linger across portions of the basin and range today. Clearing skies and drier conditions will become established this week as high pressure develops across the region. Seasonable temperatures will prevail through midweek with cold overnight lows expected across valley locations. Temperatures warm again by the second half of the week and into next weekend.

San Francisco Weather:

Isolated showers will end by this afternoon. Warmer temperatures are forecast by Tuesday and Wednesday as offshore flow develops as a result of a building upper level ridge and surface level thermal trough.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Other than a few lingering showers in the northern Sierra today, warmer and drier weather along with breezy north winds develop across the region early this week.

Hanford Weather:

A few showers are possible over the higher elevations of the Sierra Nevada this afternoon as a trough of low pressure exits the region. Higher pressure moving in by Tuesday will produce clearer skies and warming temperatures for the area through the week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Low pressure aloft will move slowly east through today. Coastal morning clouds and drizzle in coastal and valley sections are also possible. Temperatures will be gradually warming through the middle of next week as the low slowly continues to the east.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

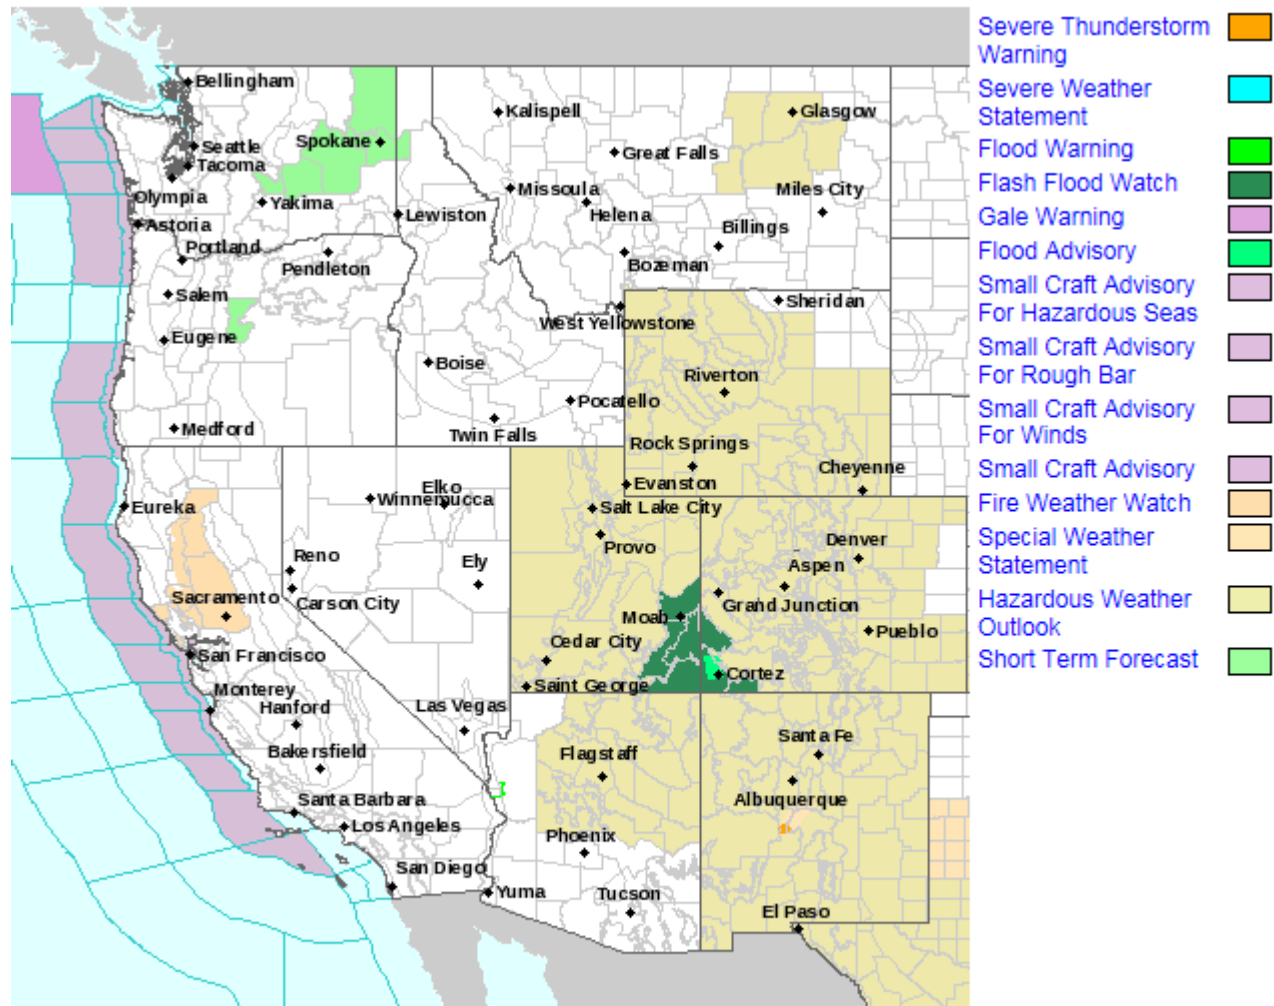

A low pressure system moving into Nevada today and a second low pressure system developing near Yuma Tuesday will maintain a slight chance of mainly afternoon and early evening showers, mainly near the mountains, into Tuesday. There will be gusty northeast winds near the coastal foothills for Tuesday into Thursday. A deep marine layer this morning will become patchier for Tuesday and Wednesday, and then may return late in the week. Weak high pressure aloft will return for next weekend bringing a warming trend.

Southeast California Weather:

A persistent area of low pressure over the western United States will bring elevated chances of showers and thunderstorms to the Desert Southwest through the middle of the week. Temperatures will cool off as the low pressure affects the region resulting in highs in the 80s, or a few degrees below normal. Drier air will filter later this week ending rain chances after Thursday.
